On Demands

Editor:

The obstructionism of Eureka City Attorney Cyndy Day-Wilson ("Eureka Gets Squirrely about Handing over Public Records," May 19) and the city's deceitful press release in support of her dilatory tactics prove again two hallowed truths:

"Power concedes nothing without a demand. It never has and it never will." — Frederick Douglass.

"The secrets of government, like the secrets of men, are always their defects." — Thomas Paine.

Paul Mann, McKinleyville

Notes on "Field Notes"

Editor:

Regarding Barry Evans' column on "The Good Old Days?" (May 19), I would add a third "great evil" on which our country was built: unrestrained resource consumption, damage and waste.

In just a few hundred years, the non-indigenous peoples who settled the U.S. wreaked unfathomable devastation on our landscape and its inhabitants. Immense forests were cleared, streams were irreparably damaged, superabundant animals were driven to extinction or nearly so, huge expanses of prairie were converted to cropland, enormous amounts of topsoil were lost ... The list goes on and on and on.

The original, "indigenous" settlers surely would've done the same if they'd had the technology, but they didn't. Our current environmental regulations, while far from perfect, are a huge step forward in reducing the ecological costs of "progress."

Mr. Evans incorrectly used the word "lifespan" where he meant "life expectancy." There's no such thing as an "average lifespan" unless you're considering multiple species. Lifespan is the maximum potential lifetime of a member of a given species, set by the longest-lived individual of that species. Life expectancy is the average lifetime of individuals of a species or population and can be expressed over an entire lifetime (as in a cohort life table) or just a portion thereof (as in a period life table).

Did M. Rousseau really refer to our indigenous ancestors as "nobel savages"? That invokes an amusing image. "This year's Nobel Prize in savagery goes to. ..." Nominate your favorite despot today!

As for the drop in the murder rate ... Well, there are just so many more people to kill now, it's hard to keep up.

Ken Burton, Arcata

Poetry & Suds

Editor:

I really enjoyed Michael Kraft's poem "Brew Pub Window" in the May 19 edition. He did a great job weaving his own poetry with that of one of my favorite poets. If only he had managed to somehow work in the two most famous lines from Housman's poem: "And malt does more than Milton can/To justify God's ways to man."

Bill Morris, Eureka

They Like Mike

Editor:

Few are prepared to confront Humboldt's looming challenges. Mike Wilson is up to the job as 3rd District Supervisor.

Working with Mike on the Redwood Region Economic Development Commission, I observe his accomplishments as we address diverse economic development from business loans to improved air services.

He is a hands-on Humboldt harbor commissioner, cleaning up a huge toxic mess and seeking funds for infrastructure. This is not glamorous work, but someone had to do it.

He leads, seeks funding (over $8 million) and works to improve a harbor for new jobs. Each project leads to increased aquaculture, boat repair and shipping local products.

As a former 3rd District Supervisor, I know what the job requires. He has deep experience and is a great team player. He makes it all come together with a plan for the future.

This is one place where your vote really counts.

Julie Fulkerson, Trinidad

Editor:

I know Mike Wilson as an environmental engineer, Harbor District commissioner for the last 10 years, community member and as a father of two. I also know Mike as an exceptionally strong trail advocate.

Most everyone is for trails in the 3rd District and beyond, however Mike Wilson is pushing trails forward more than any other elected official or candidate for public office in Humboldt County. Mike has long understood what quality-of-life is in Humboldt County, how trail infrastructure fits into that, and the economic engine that a trail system is, both in and between communities.

For over 20 years I've watched a number of accomplished trail advocates and professionals help move the Bay Trail concept forward in our community. It takes patience, perseverance, dedication and knowledge to help leverage opportunities and overcome constraints. I believe Mike Wilson is the best fit as supervisor, and certainly to help further completion and continued expansion of our trail infrastructure and the quality-of-life, safety and economic benefits that said infrastructure can and will bring to the greater Humboldt community. Mike Wilson for supervisor.

Chris Turner, Bayside

In Remembrance

By Chag Lowry
originalvoices@northcoastjournal.com

I grew up around many veterans among my mother's Yurok people and my father's Maidu and Achumawi people from northeastern California. I've had the privilege to speak with several veterans who served with my grandfather and great-uncle in World War II. I wanted to honor all local veterans during Memorial Day by sharing part of an interview I was able to conduct with the late John Milligan from Weott.

Milligan served in the U.S. Army with my great-uncle Leonard Lowry in the Pacific during World War II. His wife Jean called me after I spoke at a Veteran's Day event in Fortuna in 2007. We met a few days later at the Blessing of the Fleet in Trinidad, where we took photos of each other and I asked John if he would do a taped interview with me. He eventually said yes, so I visited with him and Jean at their Weott home on Dec. 9, 2008. John passed away in 2011. This is the first time his interview is being shared in public.

"I was born in 1925 at Myers Flat. I went to school here in Weott at the old Legion Hall. We moved to South Fork and we lived there until I was drafted. My oldest brother, Coleman, went in the service in 1942. He took basic training at Camp Roberts, California. He was sent to Alaska to Attu and Kiska. After that they sent him to the Invasion of Leyte, where he was killed. My other older brother, Bob, went in in 1943 and he was on an Air Force training crew in Wyoming. After that he ... served in India on the Burma Road in the Air Force.

"I went in the service on Dec. 7, 1943, on Pearl Harbor Day. I took basic training at Camp Shelby, Mississippi. I went to the South Pacific, to New Guinea, and I spent three months there. We went from there to Leyte for the invasion. When the 32nd Division came I was the only one out of our squad that went to Company I in the 32nd.

"We relieved the 24th Division on this hill. It seemed like it rained every night and day, but when the sun came out it was hot. After two days, we started along the hill and there were these two boys who were almost ready to rotate home on the point system and they weren't going to go, but they did, and there was artillery fire. The first artillery shell hit directly on them. I remember a piece of flesh hit me right on the head.

"We got up that hill and there were four big guns there. We waited for the demolition guys to come with the TNT to blow them up. We stayed on that hill for two weeks. We were relieved off that hill and went back to the rear. There was a package on my bunk. I opened it up and there was a letter from my uncle. He wrote me that [Coleman] was on the island. There was smoked jerky and smoked fish and two jars of eels in that package for me. He told me if I got a pass to go see Coley. I went and saw Capt. [Leonard] Lowry to get a pass and he told me that the Red Cross told him that my oldest brother had been killed.

"I went back to my hut; Capt. Lowry came over and asked if I would be his orderly. I said I would. I would get his food and coffee and get his clothes cleaned. I had two other captains that I helped this way too. I went everywhere Leonard went. We spent six months or so there and after that we went to Luzon. We were on the front lines at both places.

"When we got on Luzon we spent 49 days on the front. It wasn't all at one time. Where Capt. Lowry got wounded there, that hill was named 407D. It was a night attack and we went up ... when Leonard asked me to be his orderly he said I didn't have to be first scout anymore, but he didn't say anything about being second scout, I had to follow him everywhere! He wouldn't send anyone where he wouldn't go.

"The Japanese made an attack on us and they were sticking our men with bamboo poles with razor blades on them. We were there for a while with all these attacks. I was in a hole with Capt. Lowry when they fired and one shell hit a rock and then hit him in his left hand and cheek, and another shell went right through his stomach. I threw a smoke grenade so the Japanese couldn't get another shot in. They fired mortars at us and I thought for sure they would hit us. I was shook up that day. I didn't think we would get off that hill. I was just 19 years old.

"When we went to Japan for occupation we landed at Seibu. We were there for three months. I remember these caves they had with all these guns stored in them. We took the bolts out of them. I saw Capt. Lowry when he came back from the hospital and came to eat with all of us enlisted men. He shook all our hands. Leonard never got down on anybody, he always tried to build them up. I last saw Leonard at one of our division reunions. It was a great honor to serve with him; he was a great man. After being discharged, I remember walking into my home and both my mom and dad jumped up and came right after me and hugged me.

"Now maybe I can sleep better from now on. ... I dream about my brothers and about my time serving with Capt. Lowry. I've never talked about the war."

The Milligan Community Center in Weott is named in honor of John's family. His 32nd Infantry Division saw intense combat in New Guinea, Leyte, and Luzon among other places during the war. The headquarters building at the U.S. Army base in Herlong, California, is named in honor of Lt. Col. Leonard Lowry, the most decorated Native American veteran in United States history. Thank you to all our veterans for your service for our country. ●

Chag Lowry is of Yurok, Maidu and Achumawi Native ancestry. He's currently working on a graphic novel featuring the stories of Yurok soldiers in World War I. For more information on Chag's work with local Native veterans, go to www.originalpatriots.com.

The selfie seen around the world. But who owns it?
Wikimedia Commons

Earlier this year, a federal judge in San Francisco ruled that a macaque monkey in Indonesia did not have the right to control use of the world's greatest selfie. He snapped the photo after he grabbed a camera belonging to photographer David Slater.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, which had filed the suit on behalf of the monkey, Naruto, filed an appeal in March that remains pending.

Naruto had a better chance of controlling his own image than Kiska, an Orca at Canada's Marineland near Niagara Falls. Because Orcas don't have opposable thumbs, they can't take selfies. And because Kiska is not out in the jungle but held captive inside Marineland, on private property, the aquatic-themed amusement park owns all video footage of her. Or that's the argument Marineland makes in a lawsuit filed against Humboldt State University student and animal rights activist Zach Affolter this month over a documentary titled Blackwater. Affolter made the unreleased documentary using footage of Kiska taken surreptitiously by an unnamed Marineland employee. Now, Marineland wants $1 million in damages and is arguing that it controls the copyright on all images taken within its properties by its employees, according to their employment contracts.

By the time this column goes to print, Affolter will likely have reached his $5,000 goal in a GoFundMe campaign to defend himself in Canadian court. Affolter isn't your average Humboldt student. According to the San Diego Union Tribune, he won a national award from PETA while in high school for his activism on animal rights and, according to his own website, he's a member of PETA's youth advisory board. Considering how much time, effort and money PETA has spent defending Naruto's right to a selfie, I'd bet PETA won't leave Affolter high and dry in this lawsuit.

In the case, Marineland argues that Blackwater will be used to raise money for animal rights causes and consequently is intended for commercial gain. In an email to the Niagara Falls Review, Affolter disputed that, saying he intends the film to be for educational purposes.

The suit raises an important issue. If you make a video that you don't ever charge people a penny to see, but it ends up raising substantial amounts of money for organizations that fight for causes related to the film's subject matter, does that categorize your film as commercial? The connection seems flimsy.

The lawsuit itself is a perfect example of a SLAPP suit. That's the acronym for Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation. In simple terms, it means lawsuits a corporation files to scare people so they stop protesting or publishing material that gives the business a bad name. Sometimes these suits are filed on shaky grounds and the point isn't to win cases but to cause the defendants to spend time and money fighting them. Often, companies direct SLAPP suits against individuals who don't have the resources to defend themselves.

In this case, Affolter will have to fight in a foreign courthouse almost 3,000 miles away. And since the suit is filed in Canada, Affolter doesn't have the protection of California's Anti-SLAPP law. That law, passed in 1992, protects "conduct in furtherance of the exercise of the constitutional right of petition or the constitutional right of free speech in connection with a public issue or an issue of public interest."

The California law makes it easier for SLAPP defendants to get their suits dismissed and get compensated for legal costs.

SLAPP suits usually involve claims of libel or slander, not copyright, which is a complicated area of law. In journalism courses, we teach students to be aware of copyright issues and to make sure they have permission to use images they haven't taken themselves. In general, you want to avoid being sued for copyright violations because it's a crapshoot whether or not you'll prevail.

But the Canadian courts should dismiss this suit. If they don't, it's bad news for reporters and citizen journalists. In this case, Affolter didn't take the video footage himself and he didn't steal it from Marineland. Instead, he was given footage to which someone else had questionable rights.

This is a whistleblower case. If Marineland were a government entity, the person who gave Affolter the footage could get in trouble and perhaps the court could charge Affolter with contempt and jail him for refusing to identify the person. But Affolter could not be prosecuted for publishing the information.

But Marineland is a private entity and the question is how tight a hold it can have over images taken in its park — a place that is open to the public and visited by millions of people each year.

When students at HSU perform in dance, theater and musical productions, school representatives tell the audience not to take video or photos. The student performers have a right to their own images as copyright law protects performances. It makes sense. You shouldn't be able to go into a performance of Hamilton or The Book of Mormon and then post that video to YouTube and make money off Google Ads. Copyright protection exists so people who put considerable time, effort and money into creating something can reap the benefits of that creation. Copyright laws are intended to protect the rights of creators and to foster more original creations.

While student performers retain the rights to their images, professional performers often don't. It is the producers of Hamilton and The Book of Mormon who control photos and images of the performances, not the performers. And so at Marineland, the owner of the park owns images of Kiska as she swims through water or flips her tail in the air. Whether orca, human or monkey, she wouldn't have the right to her own images.

But copyright laws are not intended for suppression of journalism. They allow for limited duplication for what's called "fair use" and educational purposes. That allows people to quote from books or show short clips from movies as commentary.

If the courts here or in Canada decide that copyright trumps free press, it would make it hard for journalists to do their jobs, barring them from showing images of wrongs being committed.

On the other hand, the Internet makes it harder and harder to control the use of images. Just ask anyone who has been memed. And so maybe the proper response to a SLAPP suit based on copyright is to slap back in a different way. The person who took the questionable footage in the first place could disseminate it as widely, in as many forms and on as many websites, as possible. The suit against Affolter isn't the only one Marineland has outstanding against animal rights activists. But the aquatic park can't sue everyone. Photographer David Slater won the suit PETA filed on behalf of Naruto because the courts said he owned the copyright on the monkey selfie. But Google the photo and you will find Naruto's smiling face all over the place. And that puts a monkey smile on my face. ●

Marcy Burstiner is chair of the Department of Journalism and Mass Communication at Humboldt State University. She advises students that when they take photos of monkeys, they should make sure they get the monkeys to sign proper waiver forms.

CELEBRATING THE BEST AND BRIGHTEST

Hey, beautiful! Yeah, you, Humboldt, lookin' good! El Nino's on its way out, the rain jackets are back in the closet and it's time to enjoy all that good summer sunshine! So which person, place or thing got you through those long rainy months? We want to know.

Here's how Best of Humboldt works:

Round 1! You nominate your favorite person, place or business in each category.

Round 2! We do the math and find the top three nominees. Then you vote for your favorite out of those three.

So how do we make sure there's no cheating or robo-voting? You'll have to make an account and confirm your email, but it's super quick and easy, we promise! And your email is safe – we won't save it, sell it or send you invitations to our open mic night. Once your account is up and running, you can nominate and vote once a day. Vote for as many or as little categories as you like, and if you're a super hardcore voting machine, we'll have a prize or two for you:

Greeting the Pot Czarina

By Grant Scott-Goforth
grant@northcoastjournal.com

A line of more than 100 eager attendees snaked out of the entrance to Arcata's D Street Neighborhood Center to meet the chief of California's newly formed Bureau of Medical Marijuana Regulation.

The czarina, Lori Ajax, started the meeting, explaining to a mostly jovial crowd that the bureau was in its infancy. "I started with the bureau on Feb. 24," she said. "It's the strangest thing when you start at a place and you're the only person."

The bureau's biggest priority at the moment is hiring, she said, before introducing Assistant Chief Counsel Tamara Colson — appointed by the Governor a week before — and An-Chi Tsou, a senior policy advisor who had worked closely with drafters of the medical marijuana act that passed last year and created the bureau.

Tsou led most of the meeting, and made clear early on that it was a "listening tour;" they were in Humboldt to hear local concerns.

Most of the details of the regulations will be worked out over the next year and a half before the bureau begins to enforce new laws in 2018. That point was lost on several speakers who approached to ask specific questions. Tsou assured them answers were coming, and that their voices were needed while regulations were drafted.

Others complained about details of the legislation, like the separation of cultivation and distribution licenses. "Distribution never has been a problem," said one apparent grower to roars from the crowd.

Tsou patiently explained that the legislation — drafted and passed last year — was in the hands of the legislators. The bureau's responsibility is to take the framework of the law and create the specific regulations it calls for. Changing who can hold what license types is out of the bureau's jurisdiction.

Other speakers called for anti-monopoly measures to be considered, asked the bureau to allow people with drug felony convictions to participate in the industry and expressed concerns about growers being willing to come out of the shadows. Tsou asked for suggestions about how to encourage people not only to come into compliance when regulations are set, but to engage in the drafting process. She received little direction except for concerns about the costs of doing business in a regulated market.

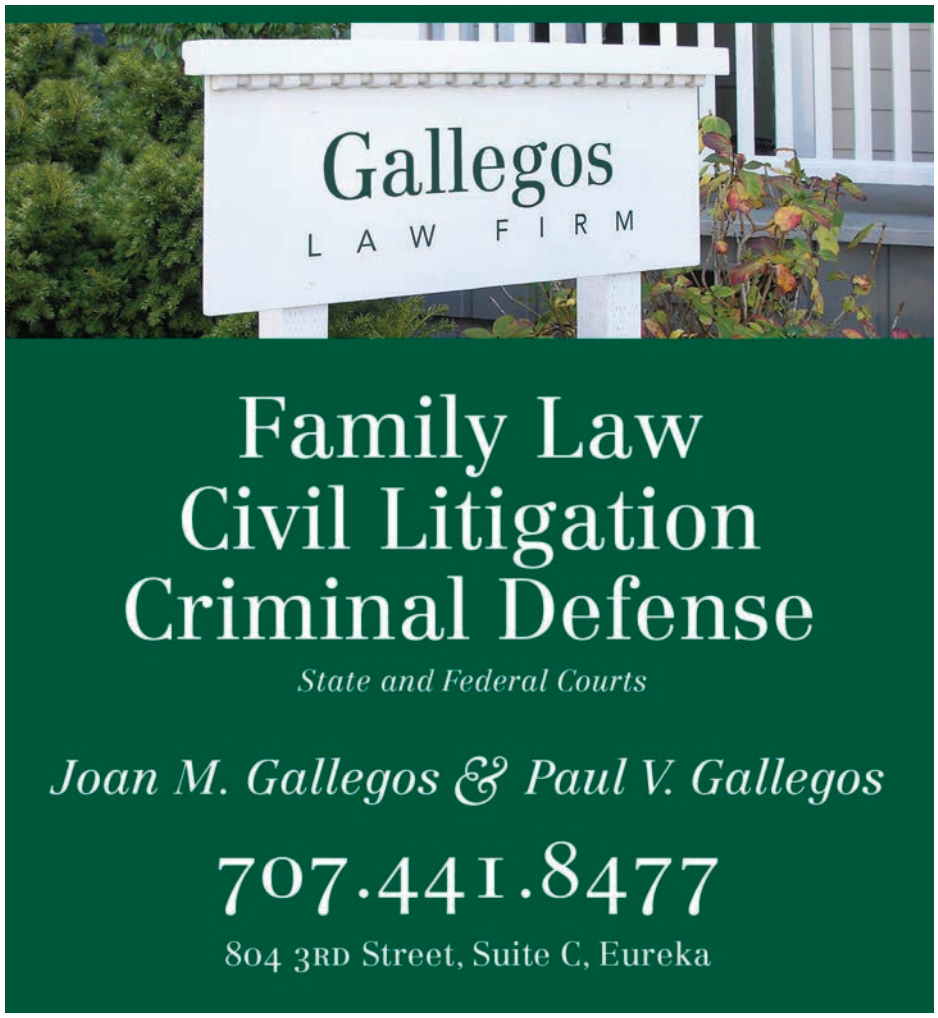

Several people spoke about the importance of protecting medical marijuana patients — ostensibly the entire point of California's existing marijuana industry — including Americans for Safe Access Director Kristin Nevedal, who said she wanted strong standards for quality controls between the multiple licensed businesses that will see marijuana from seed to its medical users. Others feared a continued black market would mean patients would continue to receive untested and potentially dangerous products.

But the overwhelming attitude at the meeting wasn't about patients. It was about protecting Humboldt County growers' business interests. A partner from Hummingbird Healing Center said there was a "real opportunity to help people in this room — legacy farmers." The increased costs of doing business in a regulated industry would be oppressive, he said, and drive farmers out of business. "We really need for you to look out for us."

Another said growers were spending a lot of money to become limited liability corporations and to come into compliance with moving regulatory targets, and asked for some guidance to prepare themselves for 2018. Tsou responded they should be engaged in the drafting process.

After Tsou ended public comment and thanked people for coming to the meeting, one man shouted angrily from the crowd. Tsou, Ajax and the rest of the bureau needed to "do the math," he said. They needed to protect the growers or face, he said, the "collapse of an entire industry."

Man Shot By Police in Arcata

A San Diego man who appeared to have been living in Southern Humboldt was shot by Arcata Police on Tuesday, May 17 after allegedly attacking two officers.

Joshua Adelynia Hoffman, 26, was shot four times in the Shell gas station parking lot at 14th and G streets. APD also identified the two officers involved in the incident: Matthew O'Donovan deployed his taser and Don Arminio discharged his firearm, according to a press release. They have been put on administrative leave per standard protocol. This is Arcata's first officer-involved shooting resulting in injury since the 1980s, according to the department.

Arminio opened fire, according to APD, as Hoffman charged him wielding a metal cane while ignoring numerous orders from the officers. Neither officer was injured during the incident.

Arcata Police Chief Tom Chapman said police were called to the Shell station at 6:43 p.m. to a report of a man drinking alcohol from an open container.

Shell clerk Russell Plocher said he's the one who made that call to police. Plocher said Hoffman — dressed in a large black sweatshirt with a hood pulled over his face, wearing sunglasses and carrying both a long wooden stick and a metal cane — had come into the store around 6 p.m. and was acting strangely. Plocher said Hoffman purchased some beer, left the store and then began drinking in the parking lot.

Plocher said he went outside to tell Hoffman he needed to leave the premises, at which point he stood up and began swinging the cane and stick, almost like martial arts weapons. At that point, Plocher said he went back inside and called police.

Officers arrived about 10 minutes later. "When they rolled up, he stood up and started waving the sticks," Plocher said. The two officers calmly told Hoffman to put the sticks down, Plocher said, at which point Hoffman became enraged. "He just yelled, 'Fuck you. Ahhhh,'" Plocher said.

Plocher said Hoffman started swinging the sticks and moved aggressively toward one of the officers. Plocher said he then heard three gunshots and saw Hoffman fall to the ground. Minutes later an ambulance arrived and transported him to the hospital, where he was listed in critical but stable condition.

According to his Facebook page, Hoffman grew up in Southern California, where he worked as a lifeguard and for a stint at Costco. He graduated from Canyon Crest Academy — a sought-after public school near San Diego that offers specialized education in arts, science and technology — before moving to Eureka in 2013. The site lists Hoffman's current city of residence as Garberville.

The county's critical incident response team is investigating the shooting.

Eric's Law

The Sheriff's Office is still releasing people in the dead of night

By Grant Scott-Goforth

By now the story is familiar, though no less ghastly. Shortly after midnight on Jan. 1, 2014, Gary Lee Bullock walked out of the Humboldt County jail. By dawn, St. Bernard pastor Eric Freed was dead.

While a parish reeled with the loss of its leader and a community tried to make sense of the brutal crime, focus turned to the Humboldt County Sheriff's Office, whose staff had released Bullock from jail shortly before the killing.

Why had they done that, the community asked? The Journal attempted, in a story that month called "Dead of Night," to answer a broader question: Why does the jail release anyone in the middle of the night?

It's a question we're still asking. The sheriff's office has enacted changes aimed at protecting inmates and the community, but there are still dozens of people released every month into downtown Eureka in the middle of the night.

Freed was the second victim of homicide in a several-month span that had followed a late-night jail release, when social services and shelters are closed and buses don't run. Bullock was originally jailed Dec. 31 on suspicion of being under the influence, and exhibited violent, bizarre behavior during his arrest.

Hindsight was the Sheriff's Office's bane, of course. No one knew that Bullock would go on to commit a disturbing crime that night. But people still wanted answers. A community meeting overflowed with sadness, anger and fear as Sheriff Mike Downey explained release policies and his responsibility to the U.S. Constitution, which limits how long people can be detained without charges filed against them. When people were ready to be released, the jail released them, Downey explained, whether that was noon or midnight.

But jail policies began to change. In May of that year, Downey announced the jail would conduct exit interviews with inmates, and would offer them the chance to stay in custody until daylight, if they chose. The sheriff's office also announced it would begin returning money taken on intake in the form of debit cards rather than the previously issued checks.

In August of 2014, the county grand jury released its investigation into the jail policy, saying that it may have been in violation of a state law that requires transportation to be provided to people arrested more than 25 miles from the jail. On top of that, the grand jury recommended the sheriff's office should immediately stop releasing people between the hours of 6 a.m. and 9 p.m., adding that it had determined constitutional concerns cited by the sheriff weren't likely to have legal impacts.

"The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that jails can legally hold people for 48 hours before they must be brought before a judge," the Journal reported following the recommendation. "Releasing them prior to that period is discretionary, the grand jury determined."

> Six county jails in California hold inmates until daylight, citing a lack of transportation. The Imperial County jail told the Journal in 2014 its policy had never faced a legal challenge.

But Downey said the jail would not comply with the grand jury and late-night jail releases continue to this day.

Where do we stand now? Public pressure on the sheriff has eased in the years since Freed's killing, but Bullock's trial brought new details and prompted some new questions. And the Sheriff's Office has developed some new policies aimed at protecting the community and freshly released inmates.

Much of Bullock's trial centered around his motivation for breaking into the St. Bernard rectory, where Freed lived. Having been released from jail, shooed off church grounds by a security guard and visited by EPD officers, Bullock spent most of the early morning exhibiting strange behavior around the church.

The defense did not deny Bullock killed Freed, but indicated Bullock was searching for a safe, warm place to sleep. He had been arrested hours earlier in Redway and let out 65 miles away, when there were no shelters open for intake. The prosecution said Bullock broke into the rectory searching for the keys to Freed's car — for a way to get back home. After Freed's killing, Bullock stole the car and returned to Redway. Both sides essentially argued Bullock was motivated to commit his crimes because he was stranded and without shelter.

From March 1 to April 8 of this year, at least 130 people were released from the Humboldt County jail between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. onto the streets of Eureka. That number excludes inmates who were transferred somewhere, got bail bonds or had completed a sentence — the presumption being that those inmates would have had time to make arrangements and sober up in the time since their arrest.

The jail now conducts exit evaluations with inmates, during which corrections officers observe them for signs of intoxication, or for signals that they may pose a danger to themselves or others. It's pretty similar to a field sobriety test, said Duane Christian, the Sheriff's Office's compliance officer.

Correctional officers are trained to do this when they're hired, and also receive four hours a year of medical training that includes how to recognize signs and symptoms of being under the influence, Christian said.

"We also have a ... machine that can be used for screening the blood-alcohol level of someone if there is a concern after a considerable amount of sobering time they are still under the influence," he wrote in an email. "We are also looking for signs and systems of other intoxicants, not just alcohol."

The evaluation also includes a mental health component: Officers are expected to determine if the inmate presents a danger to him or herself or others, and if so, call upon a supervisor, who has the authority to take the inmate to Sempervirens psychiatric hospital.

During the evaluation, Christian said, officers offer inmates a ride to Sempervirens, even if they're not exhibiting mental health problems.

When inmates are released in the late night or early morning hours, Christian said, the evaluator offers them another option: to call a friend or family member for a ride, to call a cab for a ride, or to stay in custody until daylight hours. Inmates sign a form saying those offers were made.

The Sheriff's Office has also acknowledged that it must comply with state law, and provides bus tickets to indigent people being released from jail. That has been a successful program, Christian said, though the jail doesn't keep statistics on how many people have been given bus passes since it was instituted. He estimated it's fewer than five a month.

In "really, really rare" circumstances, deputies have given rides to people who've been arrested outside of bus coverage areas. A slightly more common occurrence, he said, is the arresting agency giving someone a ride back to the place of arrest.

Eureka Police Chief Andy Mills told the Journal in 2014 that he was more concerned about exit evaluations being robust than the time of day people were released. Asked about the jail's updated release policies, he said he hadn't seen them and couldn't comment on them, but added that he entrusts that to the sheriff.

Mills reiterated the sheriff's argument — that people couldn't be compelled to stay in custody past the time they were released just so they wouldn't be let out late at night.

To a certain extent, University of California Hastings law professor David Levine agrees, especially when it concerns people brought in on California's intoxication hold, when there's no intention of charging the person with a crime.

"It doesn't seem right that they could put some substantial minimum time on it," he said. "If you come in publicly intoxicated and, no matter what, sit in jail for 48 hours — then that becomes a punishment. ... If [an inmate who is] sober and had not committed another crime said, 'OK, I'm alright' — why shouldn't they be able to walk out?"

On the other hand, Levine said, there are liability concerns to consider. According to case law, once a person is taken into custody — whether he or she is taken to jail or not — the arresting agency cannot put him or her in danger.

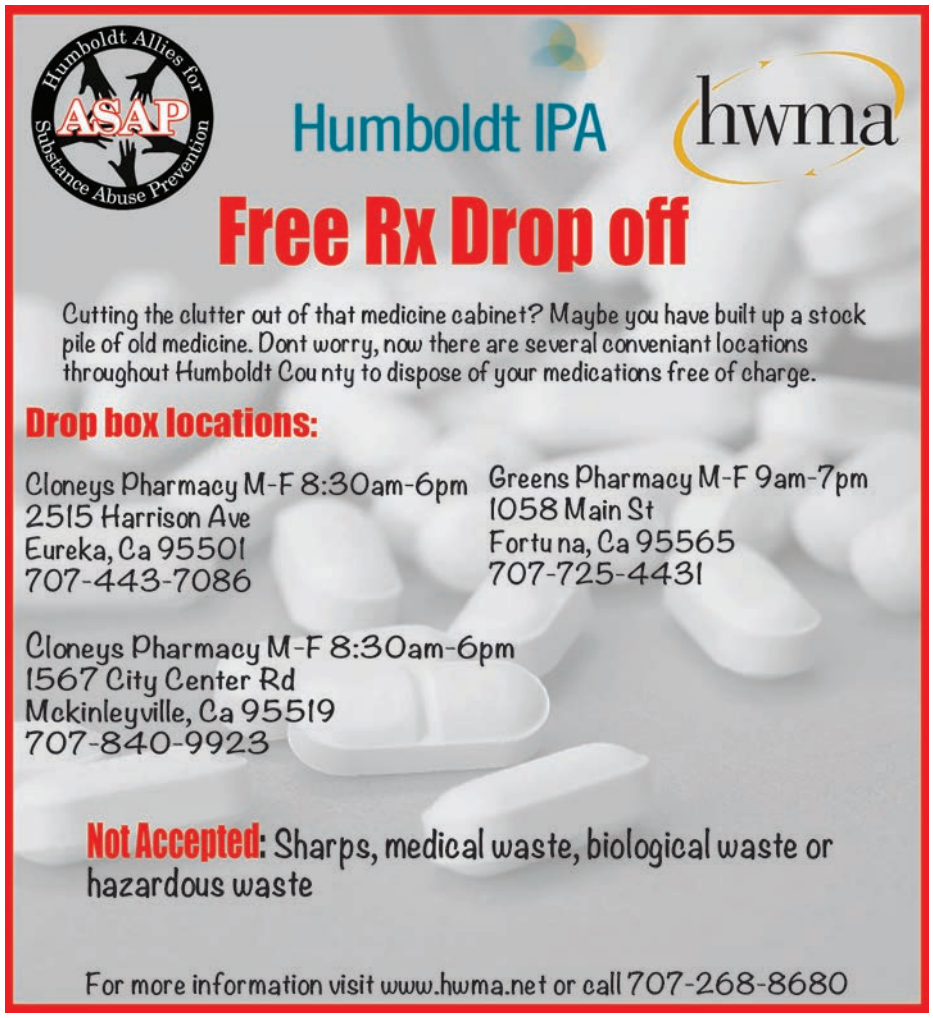

Under certain circumstances, Levine said, releasing people in the middle of the night — where they could be subject to crime, the elements or dangerous traffic — could be a liability. A policy holding people until daylight, when shelter and buses are available, could be defensible, Levine said, as long as it doesn't exceed 48 hours and is "within the realm of reason."

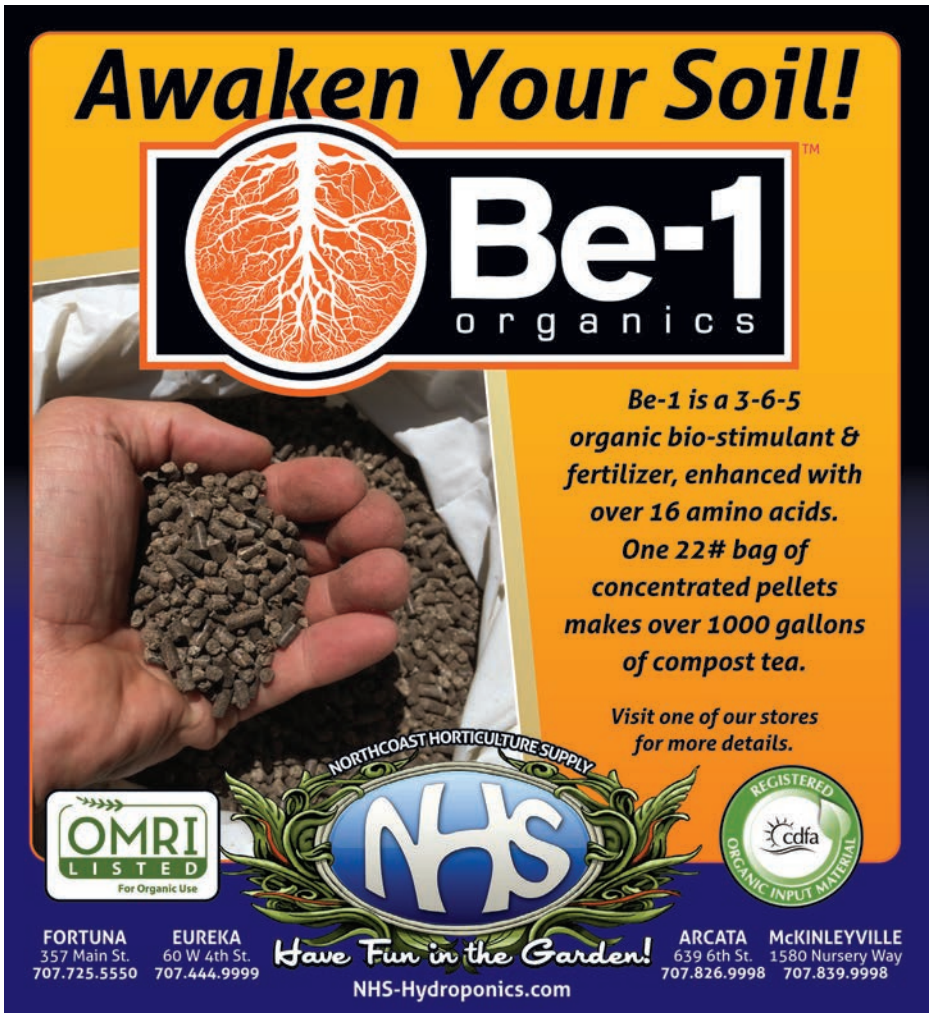

In fact, six counties do hold inmates until it's safer to release them. The Sheriff's Office itself, in addressing its policy in 2014, found that six county jails in California (out of only 20 that had responded) hold inmates until daylight, citing a lack of transportation. The Imperial County jail told the Journal in 2014 its policy had never faced a legal challenge.

But while the Sheriff's Office said it would be amenable to change — and it seems to have the discretion to do so — late-night releases continue. The statute of limitations for a wrongful death lawsuit in Freed's case has passed. But Cathy Dellabalma, a long-time St. Bernard parishioner who hosted Freed's family during Bullock's trial, said the family desperately wants to see Humboldt County change its policy.

"They'd like to see it throughout the state, but especially in rural areas," said Dellabalma, who also served on the grand jury that recommended the change in policy that Downey refused to implement. "[Freed's] sisters had really hoped that there could be some kind of movement that would take place where that would be legally changed. It could be called 'Eric's Law.'" ●

A court document reveals Bullock's convoluted explanation of the night he killed Eric Freed

By Thadeus Greenson

In the two-and-a-half years since the New Year's Day murder of St. Bernard Catholic Church pastor Eric Freed, one voice has been notably absent amid the court proceedings and the media coverage: that of Freed's killer, Gary Lee Bullock.

While jurors heard snippets of a few phone conversations Bullock made from jail, the public has received no first-hand explanation of his bizarre and heinous actions that left a beloved local priest dead, a community in mourning and Bullock living the rest of his life in prison. But a pre-sentencing report, compiled by the Humboldt County Probation Department after Bullock was found guilty, was recently unsealed and offers a chilling window into his mind. The report includes summaries and quotes from three interviews Bullock did with psychiatrists the court appointed to determine if Bullock was legally insane at the time of Freed's slaying.

It's hard to know exactly what to make of Bullock's statements to the psychiatrists. What were his motivations? Was he honest with them? Was he trying to deceive them into thinking he was insane in order to avoid prison? No one but Bullock can fully answer these questions, but the report offers the public its first glimpse into what was going through Bullock's mind on New Year's Day of 2014.

"I feel worthless," Bullock told psychiatrist Anna Glazer in July of 2015. "There's nowhere for me to go from here. I want to cry out and do something stupid. Not to get attention. Maybe to punish myself. ... I can't stop going over in my head what I've done and why I did it."

Born Jan. 6, 1970 in Santa Barbara to Donald Bullock and Carol Bruno, who would divorce when Bullock was 4, Bullock was raised in Southern Humboldt County, where his mother worked as a concert promoter and his stepfather was an electrician. Bullock graduated from South Fork High School in 1988 and went on to live in the Southern California town of Temecula.

> "I made him repent in the name of Jesus. I thought I was an archangel. Like I had power. It was really weird. This went on until I was arrested by police."

By the time Bullock relocated to Humboldt County in 2013, his life was spiraling. A marijuana conviction had led to a stint in federal prison in the mid 2000s, and his second career as a truck driver was cut short by a debilitating back injury. He was married with twin daughters, but Bullock's diagnosed bipolar disorder seemed to complicate things. Bullock, who reported having smoked marijuana occasionally throughout adulthood and dabbling with cocaine in his 30s, said he began using methamphetamine in 2013 because he was "bored," and would snort about a gram of the drug daily. This led to a possession arrest in April of that year, and a plea agreement led to a two-week stint in a residential treatment center. After his release, Bullock said he stayed sober for about six months before relapsing in late 2013.

"He reported that upon starting to use methamphetamine he immediately began hearing voices," the report states. "He said he would typically go for two days at a time without sleeping."

Bullock told psychiatrists that he had been "hysterical" for about a week prior to Freed's murder. He was having difficulty sleeping, and had "a sense that the world was coming to an end." On Dec. 30, 2013, he said he snorted methamphetamine all day and into the night. The following day, he did more methamphetamine and he and his wife drank two bottles of wine together. Then, Bullock said, his wife took their children and went to a relative's house, concerned by Bullock's "odd behavior."

"[Bullock] said he was feeling paranoid, and he began looking for his children," the report states. "He believed his wife and children were being murdered."

Bullock accosted a neighbor in his trailer park and accused him of having his wife and kids in his trailer. The altercation became physical, Bullock said. "I made him repent in the name of Jesus," Bullock told one of the psychiatrists. "I thought I was an archangel. Like I had power. It was really weird. This went on until I was arrested by police."

Hours later, Humboldt County sheriff's deputies, after receiving numerous calls regarding Bullock's bizarre behavior, would find him hiding in a bush. He was arrested for public intoxication. En route to the jail, Bullock became combative, kicking the windows of the patrol car and spitting on deputies. He told a psychiatrist that he swallowed his gold wedding band, fearful the cops would take it.

Once at the jail, Bullock told psychiatrists, his paranoia continued. He said he wrapped himself up in his shirt, believing it was "like a cloak of invisibility."

"It was a big stretchy shirt," Bullock explained. "That's how I sat until I left."

Bullock was released onto Fourth Street 43 minutes into the new year, about six hours after his arrest. He told psychiatrists that he "still had psychotic stuff going on" and believed a tidal wave was coming so he needed to get to the top of a tall building. He said he wandered across the church and believed it was a rehabilitation center. He said he was cold, so he began knocking on doors hoping someone would let him in. No one answered, but he found an open door to a restroom off the courtyard.

He decided to go inside to get off the street, but first he used a piece of old metal drainage pipe to draw an "A" on the ground in rust and paint chips. Bullock described it to the psychiatrist as "an angel sign. It was protecting me from evil while I was in the bathroom. I drew it outside to ward away evil spirits."

Asked why he broke into the rectory, Bullock said he was hearing voices telling him to go inside. "I had to go in there and complete something. Help the people. I couldn't leave. When I got out of the bathroom, I was going to leave and then something told me not to leave ... There were little kids in danger and it turned out years before the preacher before molested children ... Kids were being hurt. I thought a friend, who is a girl, was being hurt. ... I ended up going in there." He said he believed there was incinerator inside that was being used to burn bodies.

After breaking in through a window, Bullock said he looked frantically for children being hurt before realizing there were none. He said he was tired and began looking for someplace to sleep, walking through the rectory still believing he was an archangel and carrying a redwood garden stake he'd found outside "as though it were a sword." He told the psychiatrist he wandered into Freed's bedroom but didn't see him asleep in bed. Bullock told psychiatrists that he sat down in a chair and tried to fall asleep but, about after about five minutes, he noticed Freed in bed. Bullock said Freed woke up and yelled at him to leave, and "that's when we got in a wrestling match. ... That's when I suffocated him. I had my arm around his neck. He was in a headlock. I choked him out. But I don't think he died."

Bullock told psychiatrists that he then went downstairs to get water and left Freed lying on the floor. "He said he could not recall details of the following hours, but that at some point he returned to Father Freed," the report states. "He said, 'I went in there and he wouldn't wake up ... I tried to feel his pulse. That freaked me out.'"

According to the report, Bullock then told psychiatrists that he realized he had to leave and went looking for Freed's car keys, finding them by the door. An autopsy on Freed's body showed extensive signs of trauma and torture, with injuries from head to toe. What Bullock told psychiatrists does not account for that, nor does it account in any substantial way for his attempts to burn Freed's body and blow up the rectory.

Once in Freed's car, Bullock said he drove to his mother's house in Redway, which he described as a "place of safety." On the way, he "stopped on a bridge and peed off of it to cleanse himself of evil," according to the report. Once he arrived at his mother's property, Bullock said he felt a sense of "impending doom."

The three psychiatrists ultimately split on whether Bullock was legally insane at the time of the murder. One determined he was, finding that while Bullock had the capacity to make a plan of action and execute it, his psychosis rendered him incapable of determining right from wrong or predicting the natural and probable consequences of his actions. The two others found that Bullock was likely psychotic and suffering symptoms associated with schizophrenia, but one concluded that methamphetamine — not mental illness — was likely the strongest factor in Bullock's actions and the other simply opined that Bullock's mental illness would not have rendered him incapable of determining right from wrong.

Ultimately, the psychiatric evaluations never made it before a jury. In a move that surprised even his attorney, Bullock withdrew his plea of not guilty by reason of insanity on the morning that the sanity phase of his trial was slated to begin and resigned himself to a sentence of life in prison without the possibility of parole.

At his sentencing hearing earlier this month, Bullock declined to address the court. ●

‘What Sustains Us’

How a congregation overcame tragedy, together

By Thadeus Greenson

Sitting in a coffee shop not far from St. Bernard Catholic parish after Friday mass, Cathy Dellabalma stared down at the kale salad sitting untouched on the table in front of her and paused to consider the question. What has the murder of beloved pastor Eric Freed done to the St. Bernard congregation?

“Made us stronger,” she said. “It’s brought us much closer and it’s brought back some people who were away.”

Dellabalma, who described herself as “created Catholic,” said one must consider two things to understand how that’s possible. First, she said, the Catholic Church is an institution that has survived thousands of years. “I don’t think I ever appreciated the structure of the Roman Catholic Church so much as I have after the death of Father Eric,” she said. Second, she said, a congregation is like a family. It may become estranged and disparate, but tragedy can bring it back together.

According to Dellabalma and others, the healing process began almost immediately. Dellabalma said she was sitting in the pews awaiting morning mass on Jan. 1, 2014 when the clock struck 9 a.m. and the congregation sat restlessly, awaiting a pastor who was never late. She said she watched as Deacon Frank Weber, the man who would find Freed’s lifeless body in the rectory next door, left the church. “He disappeared and he came back in a moment later and he was just — ashen. He said, ‘Something terrible has happened to Father Eric.’”

But even after it was announced that mass was canceled, nobody left the church. Instead, Dellabalma said someone began leading the congregation in reciting the rosary, then the Chaplet of Divine Mercy. The congregation didn’t move from the church hall until Eureka police officers came in and, gently, according to Dellabalma, told people they had to leave.

News traveled fast, and speculation even faster. Within hours, it was known there had been a murder in the rectory and almost all believed Freed was the victim. By the time police called a press conference that afternoon, Bishop Robert Vasa of the Santa Rosa Archdiocese had already cleared his schedule and was en route to Eureka. Meanwhile, mourners kept a constant vigil at the church, forming prayer circles and reciting the rosary. Paper lanterns appeared on the church steps inscribed with messages in Freed’s memory.

To understand the devastation of the moment, Dellabalma said, one must understand the dramatic impact Freed had on St. Bernard and the surrounding community. The church had been dogged in the 1990s and early 2000s by abuse allegations, with a string of lawsuits related to a number of pedophile priests that had been relocated to the area in the 1980s. Freed was an outsider with a gregarious personality who came to Eureka with a worldly view and a philosophical outlook. After graduating with a philosophy degree from Loyola Marymount University, Freed entered the Salesian Religious Congregation in Japan, where he would later be ordained into the priesthood and serve for a decade.

When Freed came to Humboldt County as the chaplain of Humboldt State University’s Newman Center in 2006, he quickly developed a reputation as someone who was accessible and passionate. Father Loren Allen, who now serves as the pastor of the St. Philip Catholic Church in Occidental, came to know Freed well, first while the two worked together down in Sonoma County and later when Freed came to Humboldt, where Allen was serving as the Pastor of St. Bernard.

Allen said Freed had an innate ability to relate with everyone, whether it be the pious lady who wanted to talk saints and prayers, the professor who wanted to discuss theology, the student hungry to see the world through a different lens or someone who just wanted to talk sports. “He could meet people at their own level and engage them, without ever seeming pretentious or like he was trying to lower himself," Allen said. "He was himself always, but he had that ability to engage."

"The bottom line," Dellabalma said, "is that he was always trying to expand that base of people you're including in your love and in your prayer."

By the time of his death, Freed had also become a beloved religious studies professor at HSU, where some of his students confessed they never knew he was a Catholic priest while taking his classes. Though he was a private person, Dellabalma said Freed quickly became revered in the larger Humboldt County community.

So when the news was fully out in the open that he'd been murdered, and details of the grisly killing found media coverage around the world, the reaction was visceral, and many descended on worship services to air their grief and seek comfort.

Allen said Vasa served a crucial role in those first days. He led worship services and mass, met with parishioners and was the face of the church. At the same time, behind the scenes, he dealt with the police investigation, coordinated with the mortuary and the coroner's office and spoke with Freed's family. And, as soon as police had cleared the rectory of evidence, Vasa moved in.

"Those first 100 hours that he was there set a tone that really was an inspiration to all of us," Allen said. "His efforts were truly heroic and appreciated."

Dellabalma said the detailed planning for Freed's funeral and multiple memorial services was extraordinary. She recalled when Freed's casket was set out for viewing, with the Knights of Columbus stoically standing watch over it. "I can't tell you the comfort that comes with witnessing that kind of reverence," she said.

Long-term planning for the future of St. Bernard began almost immediately as well. Allen said he received a call from the archdiocese within days of Freed's killing asking if he'd be willing to come back to St. Bernard on an interim basis. In the aftermath of the tragedy, the congregation needed a familiar face. Allen agreed, arriving in Eureka for Freed's funeral and remaining for eight months.

Allen said he took his cues from Vasa and immediately moved into the rectory, believing it was important for members of the congregation to be able to pass by at night and see a light on, or to catch a glimpse of him bringing in a bag of groceries and tending to the needs of daily life.

It was difficult juggling shock, grief and responsibilities "but there was work to be done," Allen said. "The place needed someone to be there at that time and I had to take charge. ... I had a wonderful parish staff and people such as the parish council and the parish financial council. We all met that first week and we just put our hands to the plow and said, 'Let's get to work. Of course we're hurting and of course we're grieving, but there's work to be done.'

"I'd never done anything like this before and few of us have," Allen continued. "There was no template or guide book on how to deal with such a matter. We just did it day by day."

Weber, the deacon, and his wife Judy are experienced grief counselors, and Allen said they were leaned on heavily. "They worked tirelessly — tirelessly — to work with many of the people, not only in the parish but non-Catholics and people from the community," Allen said. "That was a most helpful thing. But, mostly, what we did is we kept moving as a parish and a parish family."

Things have calmed some. After about eight months at St. Bernard, Allen returned to Occidental, with pastor Tom Diaz taking his place. With the trial for Freed's killer having ended, many said they are returning to some level of normalcy. But Dellabalma pointed out that Freed's name still appears regularly in the intentions of mass, which allows members of the congregation to dedicate a daily mass in someone's honor.

And, while the lines of people that filled the pews have thinned since the immediate aftermath of Freed's death, Dellabalma said average attendance has increased since before the murder. In life, Freed urged his congregation to expand its reach and bring people in. In some ways, his death has helped accomplish that.

"Faith isn't about the joyful times," Dellabalma said, sitting in the coffee shop, a silver crucifix hanging from a necklace over her blue sweater. "It's what sustains us when things are beyond understanding. I've seen that." ●

LET'S GROW GREENER

PLANTING TIPS:

It's not to late to get all those tender annuals and veggies in. Now is the time to plant corn, beans, squash, cucumbers, basil, impatiens, coleus, and marigolds.

How much is to much? Soon the summer drought will set in. New plantings should be watered weekly depending on your soil type and the weather. Over and under watering stresses plants leaving them susceptible to disease. Fewer and longer soakings will encourage a deeper root system resulting in stronger, healthier plants.

Blackspot on Roses - Roses are beautiful and will bloom all summer long but are susceptible to "Blackspot". By the end of the summer or sooner, they are practically defoliated. Keep Blackspot away by regular sprayings of fungicides such as Neem (organic) or Garden Disease Control. Spray every 10 days without fail.

Spittlebugs - Spittlebugs, or frog-hoppers, are easily identified by the frothy, white foam that protects them from predators. Wingless young feed on plant sap. In large numbers these insects can damage growth. They are easy to control by washing them off with a strong stream of water or hand picking.

Prune the Spruce - June is the best month to prune your conifers. A good rule of thumb is not to remove more the 1/2 of the green growth. Avoid pruning cuts in inactive areas (no leaves or needles). Pinch pine 'candles' by half to encourage bushier growth.

Shade Hangers - Do you have a shady spot for a hanging basket? Try tuberous begonias, fuchsias, lobelia, impatiens, ferns, Heuchera, trailing pansies, Creeping Jenny and Tasmanian Violet. A combination of all these plants will make a beautiful basket.

Peas Time

Pairing dried and fresh

By Simona Carini
tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

Where do black-eyed peas go after being at the center of the New Year's table? Are they put away in the back of the pantry for a year, like Halloween costumes in the back of the closet?

In Italy, lentils are the legume that brings good fortune and money in the New Year. My mother always prepared a pot of the prized small lentils from Castelluccio di Norcia (a village in Umbria, the region where I grew up) as a hearty yearly insurance policy. But she also cooked lentils at other times during the year, so after her death, I was not surprised to find a package of them in her pantry. The small bag of black-eyed peas (fagioli dall'occhio in Italian) next to the lentils though, surprised me; I didn't know she liked them and I have no idea how she prepared them.

When I decided to try cooking black-eyed peas, I let myself be inspired by Ethiopian cuisine, in particular messer-wot, the red lentil stew spiced with the traditional mix called berberé, a favorite of mine. The beautiful color and intense fragrance of the berberé are exhilarating: First you taste the heat from chilis and black pepper, but it soon mellows into a rainbow of spices, including fenugreek, ajwain, allspice, cardamom, ginger and turmeric. You can make your own berberé spice mix but I decided to purchase some.

With that and a handful of ingredients, this is an easy dish to make. Now that spring has started, I like to serve the spicy stew with some sugar snap peas, the ultimate "green" vegetable, in the sense that very little is discarded in the trimming process. My favorite way of preparing sugar snap peas is roasting them with shallots.

As a little aside, black-eyed peas and sugar snap peas are two different species. Sugar snap peas are a variety of peas, Pisum sativum, while black-eyed peas are a type of cowpeas, Vigna unguiculata. If you visit my home region of Umbria, besides the Castelluccio lentils I mentioned earlier, you may want to taste some of the other locally grown legumes, including fagiolina del Trasimeno (cowpea of Lake Trasimeno), cicerchia, Colfiorito lentils and roveja peas (Pisum arvense).

Table Talk

1 tablespoon berberé
¼ teaspoon fine sea salt

Rinse the black-eyed peas then place in a saucepan with the water, bayleaf, kombu, parsley stems and salt. Cover and bring the water to a lively boil quickly, then turn down the heat and let the black-eyed peas simmer until they are tender but not too soft. Taste them after 20 minutes and estimate how much longer they should cook.

Let the black-eyed peas cool in their broth, then remove the aromatics and discard them. Set aside until ready to use.

Warm up the coconut oil in a saucepan and add the onion. Stir well to coat. Cook on gentle heat until the onion is translucent, 10-12 minutes, stirring often.

In the meantime, grate the ginger and drain the black-eyed peas, leaving them moist and reserving the cooking liquid.

Add the garlic and ginger to the onion, stir well and continue cooking for a couple of minutes until fragrant. Sprinkle the berberé on the onion and stir well. Continue cooking for a couple of minutes, stirring often.

Add the black-eyed peas to the onion and stir. Add ½ cup of the cooking liquid and stir. Cover the saucepan, bring it to a boil, then turn down the heat and simmer until the peas are quite tender and the onion is soft.

Season with salt and give it a final stir. Serve hot.

Roasted Snap Peas with Shallots

Serves 3-4

Ingredients and method:
1 pound sugar snap peas
1 large shallot, halved and thinly sliced
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
¼ teaspoon fine sea salt or to taste
Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Heat the oven to 425 F.

Remove and discard the stem end and the string from each pod.

In a bowl, toss the snap peas and shallot with the olive oil to coat well. Transfer to a baking sheet lined with a silicone baking mat and spread in a single layer.

Roast in the oven for 20 minutes or until the peas are tender to your liking, stirring them once after 10 minutes.

Season them with salt and pepper, stir well and serve warm.

Reefer Madness at NCRT

By David Jervis
frontrow@northcoastjournal.com

Chris Hamby and Dante Gelormino as pusher man and victim.
Courtesy of North Coast Repertory Theatre

The motion picture Reefer Madness has spent so much time as a camp classic that it's sometimes easy to forget it was once presented with a straight face in 1936 as an educational film financed outside of the studio system, before being recut into different versions and re-released all across the land by notorious exploitation filmmaker Dwain Esper.

The genre of the "social hygiene" film spanned from roughly the dawn of talkies into the '50s and '60s, although most were 15-minute, classroom-ready shorts covering everything from dating etiquette to driver safety. Naturally, the dangers of drug use remained a favorite topic and it's doubtful there's a one among you who didn't spend a rained-out junior high school gym class subjected to one of these one-reelers.

Once Reefer Madness fell into the public domain in the 1970s, it earned new life as an object of ridicule at midnight showings or on home video, showing as it does how a few tokes on the devil weed can send youth down a spiral of depravity involving thievery, murder and even maniacally paced piano playing. A musical production was inevitable. And now the 1998 collaboration between Kevin Murphy and Dan Studney on the book and music comes to North Coast Repertory Theatre under the able directing hand of Daniel Kennedy.

As a musical production, Reefer Madness has some great pep, even if one of its central kitschy conceits — pot really, really isn't going to cause you to murder your loved ones — was played out back around the time of the Ford administration. The story follows wholesome 1930s-era teens Jimmy Harper (Dante Gelormino) and Mary Lane (Jessie Rawson), an aw-shucks, love-struck pair fond of sharing phosphates down at the local five-and-dime. But also in this universe are reefer pusher Jack (Chris Hamby) and his common-law wife Mae (Veronica Ruse), respectively bearing the calling cards of the era's shady no-goodniks: a pencil-thin mustache and a sassily bright-red dress. While the latter is more content to sell the green weed to older customers, Jack has his eyes on the soda fountain patrons. His mind is on the fact on the jukebox down there plays the likes of Cab Calloway and Fats Waller — just the sort of seductive tunes that lure one to his product.

Reefer Madness is enlivened throughout by musical numbers that draw on the decades of its setting and later, with great work from the cast and accompanying ensemble, and excellent choreography. The play is introduced and then propelled along by appearances behind a lectern by the Lecturer (Warren Hardison), who speaks to the audience about events afoot, and the narrative is assisted by a succession dancers bearing placards warnings about the dangers of a life given over to the evil herb.

As Mary, Rawson (recently seen in Ferndale Rep's Legally Blonde) makes use of a great singing voice and an impressive physicality dealing with some of the elaborate bits in the production. In the other lead as Jimmy, newcomer Gelormino delivers a fine performance, as does Danielle Merri as Sally, the sassy, jazz-loving hanger-on at Jack and Mae's den of iniquity. All three, along with the rest of the cast, are particularly great in such numbers as "Down at the ol' Five and Dime" and "Little Mary Sunshine," and costume designer Laura Rhinehart triumphs in everything from flashy post-Jazz Age dresses to dancers covered in nothing but pot leaves. To say nothing of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jesus and an anthropomorphized brownie, who all show up because, well, why not?

The modern world, this county and California, with the legality of pot looming, is far from the world that gave us the flickering frames of the original Reefer Madness. Dialing things all the way back to an era when marijuana was so out of the mainstream is a bit refreshing. In a time when pot leaves are teetering toward becoming a corporate brand on billions of dollars of merchandise, there's respite in seeing it all in a world of silly, fun song and dance. And really, that's not too much to ask.

Reefer Madness plays at the North Coast Repertory Theatre on Friday and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through June 18, with a Sunday matinees at 2 p.m., on May 29, June 5 and June 12 and a Thursday evening show on June 16 at 8 p.m. Call 442-NCRT or visit www.ncrt.net.

BEST OF HUMBOLDT 2016

CELEBRATING THE BEST AND BRIGHTEST

Hey, beautiful! Yeah, you, Humboldt, lookin' good! El Nino's on its way out, the rain jackets are back in the closet and it's time to enjoy all that good summer sunshine! So which person, place or thing got you through those long rainy months? We want to know.

Here's how Best of Humboldt works:

Round 1! You nominate your favorite person, place or business in each category.

Round 2! We do the math and find the top three nominees.
Then you vote for your favorite out of those three.

So how do we make sure there's no cheating or robo-voting? You'll have to make an account and confirm your email, but it's super quick and easy, we promise! And your email is safe – we won't save it, sell it or send you invitations to our open mic night. Once your account is up and running, you can nominate and vote once a day. Vote for as many or as little categories as you like, and if you're a super hardcore voting machine, we'll have a prize or two for you:

Participate in the Nomination round for a chance at $100 of restaurant certificates

Participate in the Voting round for a chance at $100 of restaurant certificates

Most Active Participant: A Best of Swag Bag, with $200 of certificates and local goodies

Round 1, Nominate: May 12 – June 2 • Round 2, Vote: June 9 – July 7 • Party: August 3

Sic Transit Gloria Humboldt

Or Thus Passes the Glory of Humboldt

House of Floyd plays Saturday, May 28 at 9 p.m. at the Blue Lake Casino.

The Kinetic Grand Championship is upon us this weekend, and it's hard to think of an event that more completely captures the strange, silly and fabulous spirit of life here in Humboldt County.

I arrived in Humboldt 16 years ago now, and I'm embarrassed to admit that I don't exactly remember my first sculpture race, nor the first time I heard, "For the Glory!"

I do recall the first time I took visiting family members to a kickoff at the Arcata Plaza, and when I took visiting friends another year to the kickoff and Dead Man's Drop. Watching out-of-towners get a glimpse into how special — did I mention weird? — life is and how tightly knit our community is literally brought a few tears to my eyes that day. This special event — and many others — is really something we should cherish, as I'm hard pressed to think of another place I've been that proudly flies its own freak flag to the many winds.

With all that said, when there's a big event happening in Humboldt, you know there will be bands gigging and hosting "unofficial" event parties for the folks who stay sober enough (or not) to make it to a night-time gig. So if you still have the required energy/sobriety to support a local band after supporting the Kinetic Glory, peruse the list below, or the Journal's Calendar section for the right local watering hole to keep the Glory flowing.

Thursday

You'll find one of the Marleys in Southern Humboldt at the Mateel Community Center. Stephen Marley is set to perform around 9 p.m. and if you haven't picked up tickets in advance — for what I'm guessing is a sold out show — you may be lucky enough to grab a $40 ticket at the door. Best of luck.

I was recently made aware that another Alice in Wonderland movie just came out. I became confused, as I thought a film based on the Lewis Carroll novel just came out — turns out that was five years ago — and then I got equally confused as I thought Johnny Depp was Willy Wonka and realized that was a different film. After admitting to myself that I'm out of touch — and that life is one large rabbit hole — I was glad to hear that Moo-Got-2 is headlining A Very Wonderland Costume Ball at Humboldt Brews in celebration. Joining the bill is Boa, so expect plenty of Wonderland-themed costumes around 9 p.m. $12 for this party, but only $10 if you show up in costume.

Friday

Things will be funky at the Blue Lake Casino and Hotel around 9 p.m. Wander into the WAVE Lounge to get it going with locals The Getdown. It's a free show so you don't have much of an excuse to bail.

Saturday

It's the kickoff of the Kinetic Grand Championship which — as mentioned above — is one of the weird and wonderful aspects of living on the North Coast. Get out watch the kickoff on the Arcata Plaza and follow 'em to Dead Man's Drop. If you take it easy on the day drinking and can pace yourself, there are a slew of "unofficial" Kinetic afterparties.

The one that claims the award for best press release belongs to the final show of Tigerbomb!, which, those of you hipper than I know, is an 18-year-old Guided By Voices tribute band. After forming in 1998 after some discussions on a GbV email digest fan club thing, former locals Jensen Rufe, Ryan Cook, Danny McAlerney, Aaron Karl and Big Play Ray put together the band. I could mention all the other local bands these fellas have been in, but I don't have the word count available. This final show comes 15 years after their last Eureka gig at The Vista (remember that place?) back in the aughts. They'll be joined around 8 p.m. by fellow locals The Monster Women, Opossum Sun Trail and The Mother Vines, all for free.

Also free, but at the Ocean Grove Lodge in Trinidad, is Cliff Dallas & The Death Valley Troubadours (Mojave outlaw country) and "outlaw country grass" by The Good Time Rounders at 9 p.m.

Humboldt Brews hosts Family Matters, a benefit for Bianca D (Kali Fiyah) who was struck by a car recently. Teaming up to raise some funds for medical care are DJ Touch, Masta Shredda, Grasshoppa and Haiku, all doing their part to help out. If you can chip in $5-10 it would be appreciated. Show time is around 9:30 p.m.

House of Floyd returns to Humboldt and you'll hear 'em at the Blue Lake Casino and Hotel. If you haven't caught HoF before, you're in for a treat — and a deal at only $18 — as the band not only recreates the Floyd sound to the proverbial "T," but the projection/light/laser show gets you as close to a real Floyd show as possible these days. Music starts at 9 p.m.

A little later at The Alibi you can catch Tucson rockers La Cerca as they return to Arcata on their West Coast Tour around 11 p.m. Although local band Strix Vega didn't send me a press release, I hear they'll be rounding out this $5 bill a bit after midnight (assuming their guitar player gets his guitar back from the pawn shop on payday).

Full show listings in the Journal's Music and More grid, the Calendar and online. Bands and promoters, send your gig info, preferably with a high-res photo or two, to music@northcoastjournal.com. ●

Andy Powell is a congenital music lover and hosts The Night Show on KWPT 100.3 FM weeknights at 6 p.m. He hopes Glory never fades.

Mack in the Saddle

It's the first weekend in June. And 'round these parts, that means the town yonder north off 101 has itself a little celebration. Pony Express Days in McKinleyville makes its run June 1 to 5 with a cook-off, parade, gymkhana and all-day festival. The town "where horses have the right of way" ain't horsing around. Here's a round-up of all the fun:

On Wednesday, June 1, grab your tastin' spoons, slip a pack of Tums into the pocket of your Wranglers and head out to the Activity Center at Pierson Park for the Chili Cook-Off at 5:30 p.m. ($8). On Friday, June 3 there's a Farm Fest happening at A & L Feed and Garden Supply from noon to 4 p.m. with demos on homesteadin', kids' games and lots of lil' critters (free).

Fortify your troops Saturday, June 4 at the pancake breakfast at Azalea Hall from 8 to 10:30 a.m ($7, $4 kids) before watching the parade going down Central Avenue at 11 a.m. (free). After the cars, horses, kiddos and clowns strut their stuff, make your way to the festival at Pierson Park from noon to 4 p.m. (free). There you'll find music, barbecue, the Pony Express Saloon, a horseshoe tournament and bushels of family fun. For more horsey excitement, check out the gymkhana (competitive games on horseback) all day Saturday, June 4 and Sunday, June 5 at the Kjer Road Arena (free).

All Guts, All Glory

The creativity, ingenuity and stamina involved in pulling off the world-famous "Triathlon of the Art World," the Kinetic Grand Championship, May 28 to 30 (free), is a thing to behold. The event started 47 years ago with a playful challenge from one artist to another and featured founder Hobart Brown's Pentacycle and a mere three blocks of madness. It has grown into the Memorial Day Weekend juggernaut of today, covering 42 miles of land, water, mud and sand, and sparking a handful of local, dedicated kinetic-related organizations. Someone you know is connected to the race somehow. Call it One Degree of Kinetic Nation.

If you have family in town for the holiday weekend, make sure to work the spectacle into your plans. Start at the Arcata Plaza on Saturday between 10 a.m. and noon to watch the racers take a few laps around McKinley under the scrutiny of the newly crowned Rutabaga Queen Poisin Candie and a sizable crowd of enthusiasts. They'll then head off on Samoa Boulevard to Manila for the first leg, where at 1 p.m., you can watch them tumble, slide and flop down Deadman's Drop before making their way through Eureka, ending at Halvorsen Park. Sunday, they head south through Loleta and Fernbridge to the finish line on Main Street in Ferndale on Monday. Along the way, there are parties and organized shenanigans. For a complete schedule of the insanity, go to www.kineticgrandchampionship.com.

NEIGHBORS 2: SORORITY RISING. Maybe it's the inevitable softening of my brain or the fact that I've spent enough time around 20-somethings (Millenials!) in recent years to feel roughly twice my actual age (I don't even use Snapchat, you guys), but I thought Neighbors (2014) was not only funny but somehow wiser and sharper than it had any right to be. Among the lactation and dick jokes was a compelling thread about aging vs. growing up, about confronting the end of youth as we imagine it, about one's redefining of identity as a new parent. It's possible I'm assigning gravity a little too freely — maybe also because the movie made me laugh so much — but Neighbors pulled off the rare of feat of being funny and actually being about something. Given the scarcity of satisfying comedy movies these days, I was very pleased. But I assumed it was a one-off, a fluke (a feeling reinforced when the trailer for this sequel started circulating). Despite the presence of the core cast and writers, and the return of director Nicholas Stoller, the very notion of a sequel made me reticent (anybody else still suffering from Hangover hangovers?). But Neighbors 2 delivers more of the same in a pleasantly surprising way.

Mac (Seth Rogen) and Kelly (Rose Byrne) Radner, now parents of a 2-year-old, with another baby on the way, have purchased a bigger house in a quiet suburb, and anxiously await the close of escrow (a concept neither of them grasp) on their current home. Delta Psi has moved on and most the principal members having graduated, so its former party-manse sits vacant. Enter a group of matriculating fresh-women, equally frustrated by the stuffiness of sorority life, the strictures of the dorms and the assaultive male-centricity and straight-up rapey-ness of frat parties. Shelby (Chloe Grace Moretz), Beth (Kiersey Clemons) and Nora (Beanie Feldstein) take the lead in founding a new brand of sorority. Enlisting the aid of a now rudderless Teddy (Zac Efron), they take up residence in the Delta Psi house. This horrifies Mac and Kelly and puts the sale of their own house in jeopardy. So begins the second great battle of the Radners' lives, with the women of Kappa Nu proving crueler and more resourceful than anyone might have expected.

To examine Neighbors 2 as feminist treatise might be overextending (it was written and directed entirely by men) but it is woman-positive and gross and funny in an unusual and impressively balanced way. It is first and foremost a mainstream comedy, so the jokes take priority (and as part of the great lineage of campus comedy, some of those jokes are not for the squeamish) but it also finds time to call out the anti-feminists. This is the rare sequel that is not only as funny as its predecessor, but actually has something more, and more subversive, to say with its comedy. R. 92M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

THE NICE GUYS. For my enjoyment of this I will offer no apology, no rationalization. I expected to love it and I do. The comments to follow are by way of explanation, not justification.

I, like so many, grew up on Shane Black's screenwriting: Lethal Weapon (1987) traumatized and titillated me; The Monster Squad (1987) was a unicorn of childhood that I didn't manage to catch until much later; The Long Kiss Goodnight (1996) is as much a part of Christmas in our house as eggnog and presents. And Kiss Kiss Bang Bang (2005), his directorial debut, is just about perfect, remaining one of the movies I can put on any time and sink into, forgetting my troubles. So yeah, I've been looking forward to The Nice Guys a little bit. Oh, did I mention my obsession with Los Angeles crime stories?

Los Angeles, 1977. Private detective Holland March (Ryan Gosling) pours booze into the wounds left by the death of his wife and the loss of their house in a fire. With more than a little help from his 13-year-old daughter Holly (Angourie Rice), he cobbles together a living, often by accident but sometimes through the use of his not-inconsequential intellect and skills. His investigation of the death of adult film star Misty Mountains (Murielle Telio) brings him into the path of unlicensed strong-arm specialist Jackson Healy (Russell Crowe). Healy's got his own set of problems, mainly around reconciling himself to a life of misdirected violence. Eventually the two figure out they're better off as associates than as adversaries, and go deep into a murder mystery involving the LA porn industry, the Department of Justice and the Big Three Detroit automakers.

Black's mastery of the form is on prominent display, showcased by a labyrinthine plot that he manages to keep compelling through all its twists. The grimy-cool aesthetic is spot on, down to the distinctive costuming and styling. Gosling and Crowe are near perfect comic foils for each other while also investing their characters with real humanity, depth and mournfulness. This movie seems made just for me,

NOTICE OF PROPERTY TAX DELINQUENCY AND IMPENDING DEFAULT

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3351, 3352

I, John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify as follows:

That at close of business on June 30, 2016 by operation of law, any real property (unless previously tax-defaulted and not redeemed) that have any delinquent taxes, assessments, or other charges levied for the fiscal year 2015-2016, and/or any delinquent supplemental taxes levied prior to the fiscal year 2015-2016 shall be declared tax-defaulted.

That unless the tax defaulted property is completely redeemed through payment of all unpaid amounts, together with penalties and fees prescribed by law or an installment plan is initiated and maintained; the property may be sold subsequently at a tax sale to satisfy the tax lien.

That a detailed list of all properties remaining tax-defaulted at the close of business on June 30, 2016, and not redeemed prior to being submitted for publication, shall be published on or before September 8, 2019.

That information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector at 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, California 95501 (707)476-2450.

I certify or (declare), under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct.

John Bartholomew
Humboldt County Tax Collector

Executed at Eureka, Humboldt County, California, on May 23rd, 2016. Published in the North Coast Journal on May 26th, June 2nd and June 9th, 2016.

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3361, 3362

Pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code 3691 and 3692.4, the following conditions will, by operation of law, subject real property to the Tax Collector's power to sell.

1) All property for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for five or more years.

Note: The power to sell schedule for nonresidential commercial property is three or more years of tax-defaulted status, unless the county adopts, by ordinance or resolution, the five-year tax default schedule.

2) All property that has a nuisance abatement lien recorded against it and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

3) Any property that has been identified and requested for purchase by a city, county, city and county, or nonprofit organization to serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

The parcels listed herein meet one or more of the criteria listed above and thus, will become subject to the Tax Collector's power to sell on July 1, 2016, at 12:01 a.m., by operation of law. The Tax Collector's power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to close of business on the last business day in June. The right to an installment plan terminates on the last business day in June, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at close of business on the last business day prior to the date of the sale by the Tax Collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, CA 95501, (707)476-2450.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of June 2016, is shown opposite the assessment/parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel/Assessment Number (APN/ASMT), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the Assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map, if applicable, and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The Assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's office.

NOTICE INVITING BIDS

1. Notice is hereby given that the Governing Board of the Kneeland School District ("District"), of the County of Humboldt, State of California, will receive sealed bids for the Supply, Install and Commissioning of a Grid-Tied, 7.84 kW, Solar PV System Project ("Project") up to, but not later than, 3 p.m., on Friday, June 10, 2016, and will thereafter publicly open and read aloud the bids. All bids shall be received at the office of Greenway Partners, located at 1385 8th Street, in Arcata, California 95521.
2. Each bid shall be completed on the Bid Proposal Form included in the Contract Documents, and must conform and be fully responsive to this invitation, the plans and specifications and all other Contract Documents. Copies of the Contract Documents are available for examination at the office of the Kneeland School District, County of Humboldt, California, and may be obtained by licensed contractors for free.
3. Each bid shall be accompanied by cash, a cashier's or certified check, or a bidder's bond executed by a surety licensed to do business in the State of California as a surety, made payable to the District, in an amount not less than ten percent (10%) of the maximum amount of the bid. The check or bid bond shall be given as a guarantee that the bidder to whom the contract is awarded will execute the Contract Documents and will provide the required payment and performance bonds and insurance certificates within ten (10) days after the notification of the award of the Contract.
4. The successful bidder shall comply with the provisions of the Labor Code pertaining to payment of the generally prevailing rate of wages and apprenticeships or other training programs. The Department of Industrial Relations has made available the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of worker needed to execute the Contract, including employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, apprenticeship and similar purposes. Copies of these prevailing rates are available to any interested party upon request and are online at http:// www.dir.ca.gov/DLSR. The Contractor and all Subcontractors shall pay not less than the specified rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract. It is the Contractor's responsibility to determine any rate change.
5. The schedule of per diem wages is based upon a working day of eight hours. The rate for holiday and overtime work shall be at least time and one half.
6. The substitution of appropriate securities in lieu of retention amounts from progress payments in accordance with Public Contract Code §22300 is permitted.
7. Pursuant to Public Contract Code §4104, each bid shall include the name and location of the place of business of each subcontractor who shall perform work or service or fabricate or install work for the contactor in excess of one-half of one percent (0.5%) of the bid price. The bid shall describe the type of the work to be performed by each listed subcontractor.
8. Minority, women, and disabled veteran contractors are encouraged to submit bids. This bid is not subject to Disabled Veteran Business Enterprise requirements.
9. The project is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the California Department of Industrial Relations. In accordance with SB 854, all bidders, contractors and subcontractors working at the site shall be duly registered with the Department of Industrial Relations at time of bid opening and at all relevant times. Proof of registration shall be provided as to all such contractors prior to the commencement of any work.
10. Each bidder shall possess at the time the bid is awarded the following classification(s) of California State Contractor's license: Class B (General Building Contractor) or a Class C-46 (Solar Contractor) or a Class C-10 (California Electrical Contractor).
11. Bidders' Conference. A non-mandatory bidders' conference will be held at Kneeland School on Thursday, June 2, 2016 at 2:00 p.m. for the purpose of acquainting all prospective bidders with the Contract Docu- ments and the Project site.

Owner will not accept a Bid Proposal from or enter into the Contract with a bidder, without proof that the bidder and its Subcontractors are registered with the California Department of Industrial Relations ("DIR") to perform public work under Labor Code Section 1725.5, subject to limited legal exceptions.

3.3 Debarment. Owner will not accept a Bid Proposal from or enter into the Contract with bidder, without proof that the bidder and its Subcontractors are not on the Federal Debarment list.

4. Contract Documents. The plans, specifications, bid and contract documents for the Project ("Contract Documents") may be obtained from Fortuna City Hall, at 621 11th Street, Fortuna California.
5. Bid Proposal and Security.

5.1 Bid Proposal Form. Each bid must be submitted using the Bid Proposal form provided with the Contract Documents.

5.2 Bid Security. Each Bid Proposal must be accompanied by bid security of ten percent of the maximum bid amount, in the form of a cashier's or certified check made payable to Owner, or a bid bond executed by a surety licensed to do business in the State of California on the Bid Bond form included with the Contract Documents. The bid security must guarantee that upon award of the bid, the bidder will execute the Contract and submit payment and performance bonds and insurance certificates as required by the Contract Documents within ten days after issuance of the notice of award.

6. Prevailing Wage Requirements.

6.1 General. This Project is federally funded and subject to Davis-Bacon Act prevailing wage requirements and the prevailing wage requirements applicable to the locality in which the Work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of worker needed to perform the Work, including employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, apprenticeship and similar purposes.

6.2 Rates. Local state prevailing rates are available online at http://www.dir.ca.gov/DLSR. This grant is also subject to federal prevailing wages so the higher of each apply. Each Contractor and Subcontractor must pay no less than the specified rates to all workers employed to work on the Project. The schedule of per diem wages is based upon a working day of eight hours. The rate for holiday and overtime work must be at least time and one-half. Federal prevailing wages are included in Attachment 1 to the Special Conditions.

6.3 Compliance. The Contract will be subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the California Department of Industrial Relations, under Labor Code Section 1771.4 and federal labor standards provisions pursuant to HUD Form 4010, to the Special Conditions.

7. Performance and Payment Bonds. The successful bidder will be required to provide performance and payment bonds for 100% of the Contract Price.
8. Substitution of Securities. Substitution of appropriate securities in lieu of retention amounts from progress payments is permitted under Public Contract Code Section 22300.
9. Subcontractor List. Each bidder must submit the name, location of the place of business, California contractor license number and DIR registration number for each Subcontractor who will perform work or service or fabricate or install work for the prime contractor in excess of one-half of 1% of the bid price, using the Subcontractor List form included with the Contract Documents.
10. Instructions to Bidders. Additional and more detailed information is provided in the Instructions to Bidders, which should be carefully reviewed by all bidders before submitting a Bid Proposal.
11. Bidders' Conference. A bidders' conference will be held on June 14, 2016 at 2:00 p.m., at the following location: 621 11th Street, Fortuna California for the purpose of acquainting all prospective bidders with the Contract Documents and the Worksite. The bidders' conference is _X_/ is not ____ mandatory. A bidder who fails to attend a mandatory bidders' conference may be disqualified from bidding.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF NADINE A. CHRISTIAN CASE NO. PR160144

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both,
NADINE A. CHRISTIAN
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner, CRAIG HANNA
In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that CRAIG HANNA be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A HEARING on the petition will be held on June 16, 2016 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 8.
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

TS# 16-2255 NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED: 5/19/04. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER.

A public auction sale to the highest bidder for cash, cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, or savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state will be held by the duly appointed trustee, as shown below, all right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by the trustee in the hereinafter described property under and pursuant to a Deed of Trust described below. The sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the property address or other common designation, if any shown herein. Trustor: Yang Quest, LLC, a South Carolina Limited Liability Company Duly Appointed Trustee: Foreclosure Specialists LLC Recorded 6/8/04 as Instrument No. 2004-19047-4 of Official Records in the office of the Recorder of Humboldt County, California, Date of Sale: Thursday, June 2, 2016 at 10:30 A.M. Place of Sale: On the steps to the front entrance to the County Courthouse, 825 5th Street, Eureka, CA 95501 The common designation of the property is purported to be: Vacant Land known as 111 Wave Drive, Shelter Cove, CA. Directions to the property may be obtained pursuant to a written request submitted to the Beneficiary, Jean L. Lane, Trustee, within 10 days from the first publication of this notice at 1388 Court St., Suite C, Redding, CA 96001 Lot 19, in Block 116, of Tract No. 42, Shelter Cove Subdivision as per Map recorded in Book 14, Pages 73 to 138 inclusive of Maps, in the Office of the County Recorder of said County, as amended by the Amending Map recorded in Book 15, Pages 64 to 116 inclusive, of Maps, In the Office of the County Recorder of said County. EXCEPTING therefrom all the water and water rights in, under or flowing over said property or appurtenant thereto, and 50% of all oil, gas and other mineral and hydrocarbon substances below a plane of 500 feet beneath the surface thereof, but without the right of surface entry, all as reserved by the Bank of California, National Association, a national banking association, in Deed recorded March 31, 1975, Book 1281 of Official Records, Page 307, under Recorder's Serial No. 5030, Humboldt County Records. APN: 109-361-043 Estimated opening bid: $154,681.77 Beneficiary may elect to open bidding at a lesser amount. The total amount secured by said instrument as of the time of initial publication of this notice is stated above, which includes the total amount of the unpaid balance (including accrued and unpaid interest) and reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of initial publication of this notice. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call the trustee's information line at 530-246-2727 or visit this Internet Web site: calforeclosures.biz, using the file number assigned to this case: TS #16-2255. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. Date: 5/2/16 Foreclosure Specialists LLC

Humboldt Bay Municipal Water District
Notice of Public Hearing

The Humboldt Bay Municipal Water District (HBMWD) will hold a public hearing on Thursday, June 9th, 2016, at 10:00 am, at the District Office, 828 7th Street in Eureka. The meeting will include discussion on the HBMWD 2015 Urban Water Management Plan (UWMP). The UWMP was prepared for the State of California Department of Water Resources in accordance with the California Urban Water Management Planning Act of 1983 (AB 797) (UWMP Act) as amended and the Water Conservation Bill of 2009. The UWMP will establish HBMWD's compliance with California Water Code, Division 6, Part 2.6, for all urban water suppliers who provide municipal water to more than 3,000 customers or supply its customers with more than 3,000 acre-feet of water. The UWMP describes the District's water supplies and conservation efforts. The purpose is to ensure that adequate water supplies are available to meet existing and future demands over a 20-year planning horizon. Plans are available for public review at the District Office. KEV'S CORNER

Welcome to our Q & A corner. With cannabis growing rapidly in popularity and usage, we thought we would answer some of the questions we get asked here at Wonderland Nursery. If you, the reader, have a question you would like answered, call us at 707-923-2175 and we will do our best to answer. Best question of the week, gets published.

Question:

What can i do to make my clones root better? They don't root at the same speed and take longer to root than i think they should...help!

Answer:

The speed of rooting depends on the sugar levels within the plant that you are cutting on. Try to get all the same level of sugar in your cuttings by doing a snap test of the pieces you want to cut. If you can snap a piece of the plant off cleanly, it is considered herbaceous. This is the correct level of internal sugar for rooting. If you break a piece off with fibers remaining and it has to be pulled apart, it is semi-hard wood, which isn't right for our purpose. Semi-hard wood roots, but at a slower speed than herbaceous. This is why you usually see clones rooting in a tray while others in the same tray do not. If we only use cuttings of the same sugar levels in the same trays, we should have a much higher degree of consistent rooting.

Tip! Calcium must be present to the plant at the root zone when roots are first initiated or the process is slowed dramatically. The amount needed is low but crucial. A low dose application of calcium to your rooting medium will help to rapidly establish roots.

We hope this helps to further your knowledge and contribute to your success.

Best, Kev
